

Information for Contributors

Air Force

Journal of Logistics

Old-Fashioned
Quality for the 21st Century

Your Publishing Connection

<http://www.aflma.hq.af.mil/lgj/Afjlhome.html>

Contents

- 3 Quality
- 5 Your Work
- 7 Manuscripts
- 8 The Magazine
- 11 Quick Reference

Editors

James C. Rainey
Editor-in-Chief, Air Force Journal of Logistics

Cindy Young
Editor, Air Force Journal of Logistics

Address and Phone

Air Force Journal of Logistics
501 Ward Street
Maxwell AFB, Gunter Annex, Alabama
36114-3236

Commercial (334) 416-2335/2357
DSN 596-2335/2357

QUALITY

We care about presenting what our readers need to know, we care about presenting the highest quality analysis, and we care about addressing issues of substance.

The Air Force Journal of Logistics (AFJL) offers you an unsurpassed level of quality—the old-fashioned kind of quality that emphasizes substance over just style. Looking for the latest in Air Force logistics research? Then look no further. Interested in the kind of research that improves the way you do business? We have it. Ever wonder about the lessons that can be learned from logistics history? So do we, and we publish them. The Journal is widely considered the premier logistics journal in the Air Force. Our commitment to old-fashioned quality makes this a reality.

Why is our quality so high? First, we're a refereed journal. Any article or essay submitted is subject to expert peer review. Second, our Editorial Advisory Board is made up of well-known and well-respected senior military officers—all logisticians—prominent leaders from industry, and leading academicians. And third, the AFJL staff cares. We care about presenting what our readers need to know, we care about presenting the highest quality analysis—yes, sometimes our articles rock the boat—and we care about addressing issues of substance. This philosophy extends to how we treat our authors. We care about presenting their work as much as they do—some even have said we care more. We're proud to tell you we have a personal relationship with each author who submits something to us. That's part of our philosophy about quality—old-fashioned quality.

YOUR WORK

We care about presenting your work in the best possible way.

We make a commitment to all our authors—we care. We care about publishing relevant research. We care about addressing controversial issues. And we care about presenting your work in the best possible way. In fact, some of our authors have told us we care more than they do and that our kind of caring is pretty strange these days. We don't think it's so strange. It represents our commitment to quality and to presenting to our readers the information they need and want to know. If you have the kind of work that meets the needs of the Air Force logistics community—and the AFJL standards concerning quality of research and writing—we want to publish it. If you submit something that doesn't meet our needs or standards, we'll tell you up front. And we'll tell you why in plain words—no editor doublespeak. However, more important, we also make a commitment to everyone who submits something to us that doesn't initially meet our standards to help make the changes necessary to bring it up to snuff.

MANUSCRIPTS

Manuscripts from any source—civilian or military—are always welcome.

You've finished the research. You've written the article or essay. Looking for the right publisher? Think about the Air Force Journal of Logistics.

Every article published in the Air Force Journal of Logistics is also considered for inclusion in one of our monographs or books.

Manuscripts from any source—civilian or military—are always welcome. Articles and essays should be from 1,500 to 5,500 words. We also welcome manuscripts for books, monographs, and similar publications.

All manuscripts should be sent via e-mail to the following address:

editor-AFJL@maxwell.af.mil

Manuscripts can also be submitted in hard copy if e-mail is not available. They should be sent to the following address:

Permanent Address

Air Force Journal of Logistics

501 Ward Street

Maxwell AFB, Gunter Annex AL 36114-3236

If you submit a manuscript in hard copy, a 3.5-inch disk, zip disk, or compact disk containing an electronic version of the manuscript must accompany the hard copy.

All manuscripts must be in Microsoft Word or WordPerfect format, and all supporting tables, figures, graphs, or graphics must be provided in separate files (preferably created in Microsoft Office products). They should not be embedded in the manuscript.

All submissions will be edited in accordance with the Air Force Journal of Logistics Manual for Style, First Edition.

THE MAGAZINE

The Journal is considered the premier Air Force logistics research publication, both within and outside the Air Force.

What You'll Find in the Journal—Relevant Themes

- A conscious effort to develop and institutionalize professional ethos among logisticians
- How and where logistics fits in war preparation and waging war
- Professional, educational, and career development
- Historical studies
- Technological innovation
- Statistical and quantitative logistics analysis
- Global logistics analysis
- Expeditionary airpower studies

The Air Force Journal of Logistics is the professional logistics publication of the Air Force. We provide an open forum for presenting research, innovative thinking, and ideas and issues of concern to the Air Force and civilian logistics communities.

The Journal is distributed worldwide. It reaches all segments of the Air Force and nearly all levels of the Department of Defense and US Government. You'll also find the Journal is read by foreign military forces in 26 countries, people in industry, and students at universities with undergraduate and graduate programs in logistics.

We have a strong research focus, as our name implies, but that's not our only focus. Logistics thought and history are two of the major subject areas you'll find in the Journal. And by no means are these areas restricted to just military issues or are our authors all from the military.

The AFJL staff also produces and publishes a variety of high-impact publications—books, monographs, reading lists, and reports. That's part of our mission—address logistics issues, ideas, research, and information for aerospace forces.

On the Internet

In addition to the printed magazine, we also have an online version of the Journal, which can be downloaded or read via any standard Web-based browser. At any time, the last four editions of the Journal can be seen at our Web site—<http://www.aflma.hq.af.mil/lgj/Afjlhome.html>.

Ordering Information

US Government organizations, employees of the US Government, or colleges and universities with undergraduate or graduate programs in logistics should contact the AFJL editorial staff for ordering information. Contact: DSN 596-2335/2357 or commercial (334) 416-2335/2357. 2004 AFJL subscriptions are available through the Superintendent of Documents, US Government Printing Office, Washington DC 20402. Annual rates are $15.00 domestic and $18.75 outside the United States. The AFJL editorial staff maintains a limited supply of back issues.

QUICK REFERENCE

Contact

Postal:

Air Force Journal of Logistics

501 Ward Street

Maxwell AFB, Gunter Annex AL

36114-3236

Telephone:

DSN 596-2335/2357

Commercial (334) 416-2335/2357

Electronic Mail:

editor-AFJL@maxwell.af.mil

Information for Contributors

Air Force Journal of Logistics

Old-Fashioned
Quality for the 21st Century

Your Publishing Connection

<http://www.aflma.hq.af.mil/lgj/Afjlhome.html>